Porto Silva Reis

Port Wine is, by definition, a generous and fortified wine produced in the Douro Valley- the oldest Demarcated Wine Region in the world. Produced from traditional indigenous varieties, its method of vinification is characterized by the addition of wine brandy to the must causing an interruption in the fermentation. This process preserves all natural sugars in the wine and allows the development of a licorous texture.

White Port is made from white grapes, using the same techniques as classic red Port. The Silva Reis white is made from specific parcels of indigenous white grapes, grown on the famous Alijó plateau, where the cool breezes, and mild climate are ideal for the ripening of white grapes.

Winemaking & Ageing

The Silva Reis white ensures the freshness and complexity of a young white Port, result of a blend between differently aged Ports. After interrupting the fermentation through the addition of wine brandy, the wines made for the White blend, are aged in large old oak vats for periods of 1-3 years and later blended to create the youthful White Port character, which is complex, rich and very aromatic.

Tasting Notes

A young wine, of straw-like colour, with aromas of raisins and sweet fruit. Very balanced, revealing itself very fruity on the palate, with excellent acidity and a long, lasting and sweet finish.
